

and the Overture Center,” he opined. “We live on this block. It doesn’t exist now.”

Added Kunkler: “The library will still be on the same block, 100 feet further away. It’s still within the arts district. It isn’t like we’re suggesting it be moved to the Far East side or the Far West Side.”

Under the Fiore-Irgens design, there will be connected pathways throughout the block that will allow pedestrians to reach the library at various points on the block – on the Mifflin side, through the parking structure, and through Network 222.

T. Wall, stating that that a unique architectural statement also makes for a successful library, had plans for a two-story atrium complete with exhibit space that, in his opinion, could have turned the library into a
